

ENG FORM 3 PAPER 2 MARKING SCHEME.

1. a. The evidence is that consumption per capital is higher by nearly 70%.
Also, life expectancy, child mortality and educational attainment have improved significantly. (2mks)
- b. Although the author lauds the progress made, he is not overly impressed by it because more than one billion people in the developing world are living in poverty. There is therefore no room for complacency. (2mks)
- c. The author mentions Japan in order to show how far behind sub-Saharan Africa is lagging in terms of life expectancy. (1mk)
- d. What is odd is that the region accounts for less than a third of the world's population and yet nearly half of the world's poor people live there. (contrast must be brought out) 2mks
- e. The relationship between poverty and a high population is that the poor are more likely to have large families. (1mk)
- Such an environment cannot support the population and this leads to spiraling poverty. (1mk)
- f. She/he is also less educated, and has less access to a remunerative activity. (1mk)
- g. A girl is twice as much disadvantaged because as a woman, she has to do more work. Also, she gets less education/fewer opportunities for gainful employment. As a child, she lacks adequate nutrition, health care and education. (3mks)
- h. The author argues that although the developing world has significantly improved economically it has a long way to go, since many of its people live under absolute poverty. The poverty is unevenly distributed geographically / mostly affects women and children. To combat it, governments need specific information about the poor.
