RACE TO THE FINISH

Keli stood near nine-year-old Manu who was in a wheelchair. It was noon a week of school remained, so all the classroom balls and other playground equipment checked in. Keli's pupils wondered what they could do.

"Why don't you run races to the fence and back?" Keli suggested. "Get ready! Off ran a whole dozen kids. Manu watched longingly. He could not speak, but he now he motioned for his teacher to help him from the wheelchair onto the grass. Manu's great friends ran back to where he was. Manu looked as though he despised to race with the other kids. He glanced up at Keli and they exchanged smiles.

Jula, a care giver, came by just then. "He wants to be in the race more than Keli told Jula. A few minutes later, Keli said, "well, look at that! He's going to She was surprised and thrilled at the same time. Manu crawled about six feet ahead and turned for her approval. Keli nodded and gave him a big smile. Soon his kind friends joined him. "I can't believe it!" Keli exclaimed. They're passing him!" the halfway point. Keli glanced at her watch and turned to Jula. "Will you please while I gather the other kids?" Jula walked across the play-ground. The look on showed pure determination.

"I don't care if we're late getting in," Keli decided. "This is more important." the group on. More kids entered the race, walking at Manu's speed. They finally fence. Manu turned and started back. Sometimes, he flopped on the grass. The race along with him. Then he was on his way again. Soon, all his friends were on their knees along with him. Jula walked at Manu's side. Keli and the pupils cheered when he the finish line, back where he had started. He grinned as though he had completed His brown eyes snapped with excitement. Keli bent down and helped him step onto chair. His little legs trembled. "Manu, I'm so proud of you!" She gathered his small arms and placed him in his chair as everyone clapped. Manu looked proud and then finished the race and knew he had won.
