One night last year there was a terrible storm. It caused a lot of damage. The river flooded the village. The storm destroyed some of the houses and injured several villagers. The doctor was far away and the storm broke the telephone wires.

Kwamboka's father is a policeman. He had to go help some drivers. Trees blocked the main road and the traffic could not move. There were about seven cars on the road. Kwamboka and Bosire could not go to school. As he left, their father said, “Please answer the telephone if it rings. Just take a message.”

Quite soon after he left the telephone rang. Kwamboka picked up the receiver. “hello,” said Kwamboka and she gave their telephone number. “hello! Can you help me please?” said a voice. “I am a doctor, I have flooded the bridge near the town, is there another way to go?”

Hold on a moment, please, said Kwamboka. “I’ll look at the map.” “There’s another bridge north east of the town,” said Bosire. Kwamboka picked up the receiver again. “If you drive to the north you’ll find another bridge. You can cross the river there. But don’t drive through the forest,”

Kwamboka continued. “The river has flooded the road.”

“Thank you very much,” said the doctor.
