SORGHUM BAILS ODONGO OUT OF POVERTY

Solomon Odongo, 27 of Libya village, Mukura sub-county in Ngora district is a man who does not fear challenges while many youth were leaving the villages to go to towns in search for better employment, Odongo chose to remain in the village and change his life through farming.

He embraced sorghum farming, specializing in improved varieties, such as sila and Gadam, which are used for brewing beer.

With income from only four acres of Gadam sorghum per season every year, odongo has been able to build a home in his village.

He has also started a turkey farming project and citrus growing.

Odongo says income from one seasons' harvest is enough for him to buy all cows needed to pay bride price.

Odongo says a few years ago he watched as Charles Okubal, a farmer of Landmark Millers Soroti, earned good money through selling sorghum to Uganda Breweries limited (UBL)

Without wasting time, he joined Okubal in order to benefit from the UBL linkage.

Odongo said he started growing sorghum on one acre and kept increasing acreage every season

Today, Odongo grows sorghum on about four to six acres, depending on the forecast of the season. After, harvesting, drying, threshing and sorting the sorghum into clean grains, he and others farmers collect their produce at landmark millers ad sell it to UBL as a group. Odongo says he participates in delivering the grain to UBL factory in port bell, Kampala
