Tourism in Buganda must have started many years ago even before the kingdom territory was named Buganda. According to Baganda culture and norms, visiting was very common among families and usually took place during the evening hours. Visits were common in the evening because during the day, work was paramount. Men and women often visited their friends to discuss different matters of society.

Food and drinks were always served to visitors without any cash payment to the host but among the Baganda, whoever visits someone, carries at least a gift. Gifts included among others things fruits; local brew, bark cloth, food to mention a few.

It was common basically with the men to take their visitors around their premises, farms and others. The visitors could admire and learn something from the host and would take it home with them for development.
